

To Whom It May Concern:

You'd think Bridgegate would have taught New Jersey politicians that cover-ups and vindictive retaliation are not good strategic solutions. However, it seems the Fort Lee GOP hasn't learned this lesson so let me preface this email by stating that any further retaliation by anyone connected to the Fort Lee GOP, or any of their friends, will be answered with my involving the appropriate authorities to take legal action against Fort Lee GOP. Voter Intimidation is also not a good strategic solution. And It's a federal crime.

With that being said, I strongly urge a financial audit of the Fort Lee GOP. I tried to warn them that they had a potential problem with the individual they appointed as their fund raising chair but I was ignored and then harassed.

The fund raising chair for Fort Lee GOP is Vinnie Leonelli-Spina. While holding that post she was a defendant in two separate lawsuits involving misappropriated funds, one of the lawsuits was filed by the trustees of the New Jersey Lawyers Fund for Client Protection. Vinnie lost both suits.

In each of these recent lawsuits as well as her past lawsuits and disbarment, the courts found that Vinnie Leonelli-Spina , knowingly misappropriated money entrusted to her by her clients.

Links to her lawsuits can be found below so you can check them for yourself. Among them is when Leonelli-Spina was sued by a retired police officer and found guilty of stealing his pension fund.

Judgement in that case was nearly $800,000. Vinnie has malpractice insurance but they refused to pay when the judge determined she was also guilty of common law fraud.

Leonelli-Spina was eventually disbarred in 2008 by the New Jersey Supreme Court for, once again, knowingly misappropriating funds from several clients. By 2011, the New Jersey Lawyer's Fund had paid out $330,000 to clients she ripped off.

After her disbarment, Vinnie attempted to avoid paying her court debt by declaring bankruptcy. This ended up before the New Jersey Supreme Court which ruled against Spina. It was also determined that she transferred her assets to her husband to avoid having them taken for payment of her debt.

Links to her lawsuits can be found below so you can check them for yourself. One lawsuit for misappropriation might be considered a bookkeeping mistake but three lawsuits and a disbarment show a pattern of behavior, if not a life style. But it doesn't end there.

After her disbarment, Leonelli-Spina deliberately violated the terms of her disbarment by continuing to share office space with her attorney husband, Patrick Spina. She was actually found to be working there under an assumed name.

Vinnie also started an online blog called FauxRealityEntertainment.com which eventually became a forum for her to post the private information of people she didn't like. Leonelli-Spina is affiliated with two websites, trolldox.com and tr0llz.com, where she and her webmaster, Brandon Charles King of Seguin, Texas, have posted the private information of 20 individuals, along with their children, specifically for the purpose of harassment and intimidation.

Considering all the above, perhaps you can understand why I find it unbelievable that Leonelli-Spina was appointed to a position involving money. Questioning how this came about isn't unreasonable, yet I haven't been given a straight answer.

I managed to get the attention of council candidate, John Damato, on Twitter. He wasn't aware of Spina's history but issued a statement disavowing knowledge of her behavior and disapproving of her abusive behavior. Damato was then mocked and verbally abused by several anonymous Twitter accounts, one of them known to belong to Vinnie Leonelli-Spina. That the fund raising chair for the Fort Lee GOP was trolling one of the candidates she was working to get elected is completely insane.

I also informed the Fort Lee GOP of Spina's history via their Facebook page. They deleted my comment shortly after I posted it and then removed Leonelli-Spina's name from the Fort Lee GOP website as if that solved the situation.

I wanted to find out if Spina herself had been removed so I contacted the Twitter account of Judith Fisher. Mrs Fisher is the Fort Lee GOP municipal chair, wife of Fort Lee GOP president, Eric Fisher and the person I was told who appointed Leonelli-Spina to the fund raising chair. I sent Mrs Fisher a tweet asking her why she appointed Vinnie. Mrs Fisher's response was to completely delete her Twitter account.

I then sent an email to Judith Fisher to find out if Leonelli-Spina was still fund raising chair. Rather than reply, Mrs. Fisher forwarded my email to Leonelli-Spina which was mentioned by the previously mentioned Twitter account known to belong to Vinnie Leonelli-Spina. She and her online friends then began trolling me, posting pictures of my deceased mother and deceased brother, along with their obituaries while mocking them and me.

Keep in mind that this was the week before the presidential election. Vinnie and her friends also posted my voter registration information publicly on Twitter and accused me of committing voter fraud. They tweeted out links to a voter fraud report form encouraging people on Twitter to report me for voter fraud.

So this email is being sent in the hope of finding someone with the power to make sure Vinnie Leonelli-Spina is not holding any appointed post with the Fort Lee GOP and will not hold one in the future. I also hope to find someone who'll call for an audit of Fort Lee GOP's finances. If you read the assorted Spina court transcripts you'll get an idea of how she operates and how easily money may have been misappropriated. I also hope to find someone who can convince Vinnie that her interests are best served if she stays off the internet.

In any case, thanks for your time and attention. I hope you'll take a bit more time to review the following links to the lawsuits against Vinnie Leonelli-Spina.

Yours sincerely,
